Our class is learning to type

A note home about the typing game we use in class

Dear families,

This term our class is practicing touch typing for about ten minutes a day, with a game called Bumpy Keys. This letter says what the children are doing and how you can keep it going at home if you would like to. Nothing is required.

What the children are practicing

The right finger on the right key, starting from the home row: the pointer fingers rest on the two keys with bumps, F and J. Every key a child presses moves their racer along a road, and hands on the screen show which finger to use. Stars are for careful typing, never for speed. The game does not ask children to type fast. It asks them to use the same finger for the same key every time.

Price

All 100 lessons are free. One optional $4.99 purchase opens every world on your family's device. There is no subscription.

Privacy

No accounts, no logins, no ads. Progress stays on the device. The privacy policy is at bumpykeys.com/privacy.

Devices

iPad and Mac, from the App Store. On any other computer, it plays in a browser at play.bumpykeys.com.

Time

The daily quest takes about ten minutes. Ten minutes most days works better than one long session a week. It is fine to skip days.

App Store

To practice at home (optional)

1. On an iPad or Mac, scan the code or search Bumpy Keys in the App Store.
2. Pick a starting point, and let your child pick a racer.
3. Tap PLAY for the daily quest. A keyboard helps, but is not needed to start.

Your child may bring home a certificate along the way. If you have questions about what we are doing in class, please get in touch. Questions about the game itself can go to hello@bumpykeys.com.
